NEW HOPE FOR THOSE WITH SUBSTANCE-USE DISORDER

Until 2017, substance-use disorder patients who needed detoxification in a tri-county region of rural, northern California had nowhere to go but a nine-bed social detox program in a small Victorian.

That changed with the opening of Waterfront Recovery Services, or WRS, a new 56-bed medically managed detoxification and residential treatment center. The Eureka, California, facility was established through a $1.2 million-dollar grant made to St. Joseph Health Community Benefit by the Well Being Trust, a national foundation launched by Providence St. Joseph Health. Operated by Alcohol and Drug Care Services and Redwood Community Action Agency, WRS is staffed by a multi-disciplinary treatment team, including a medical director. When patients leave, they receive assistance with life skills, employment, education, family reunification and housing.

“I cannot express in words how wonderful this program has been,” said a recent resident. “I would recommend WRS to anybody trying to get clean.”
